

EAST BREEZE

Newsletter of the James Reeb Unitarian Universalist Congregation, Madison, Wisconsin
Volume 24, Number 4 — April 2015

From the Minister

I spent a long weekend in Birmingham and Selma, recalling the Civil Rights Era with some of its UU “veterans,” and discerning, with current scholars and theologians, how that glorious and painful history might inform current racial justice issues and current Unitarian Universalism. Moving talks and workshops were interspersed with walking the road from the café where James Reeb, Clark Olsen, and Orloff Miller were viciously attacked; singing freedom songs in Brown Chapel AME; and crossing the Edmund Pettus Bridge with thousands of other people. We did all of these things together, as Unitarian Universalists, actively reflecting on how our values and our faith informed these experiences, making them deeply transformative. And in this listening and doing and being together, we learned that our relationships are the foundation upon which all of our work toward justice is built – that it is not our moral outrage but our relationships that call us into action.

I spend the next long weekend in New Orleans, at a conference on environmental justice presented by Diverse Revolutionary UU Multicultural Ministries, the organization of people of color in our denomination, and Allies for Racial Equity, the sibling organization for people who identify as white. This was our first joint conference, as the leadership of DRUUMM has always asked that the work of ARE be to support white people as they learn about systemic racism and white privilege in spaces that they can process this work without hurting people of color. This year, DRUUMM leadership insisted that we work together on a huge issue that needs all of us – that we create a new kind of relationship as we move intentionally into a very uncertain and scary future.

And while I was gone, Tony Robinson was shot and killed. And there is moral outrage.

In the midst of my own moral outrage, I’m asking myself with whom I am in relationship – and with whom our congregation is in relationship. Does our extended family include Tony and his family and community? Does it include Officer Matt Kenny? Does it include people of other faiths? What about people of color of other faiths? Or the folks in the Young, Gifted, and Black Coalition?

With whom are we in relationship? And how will those relationships guide our decisions and actions? I don’t have the answers to these questions, and I’m hoping we can discern our way in this and through this together.

And here’s a piece of that journey: when I invited our Youth Group to collaborate on an April worship service, they got right to brainstorming topics and settled on “Racial Justice.” I’m pleased and proud that our young people are eager to engage this work, and I’m looking forward to learning from them and with them.

In faith and love,
Karen

President’s Column

Our Annual Budget Drive may be done by the time you receive this letter. My hope is that you enjoyed the process and that you enjoyed getting to know more about your fellow congregants. At our best and at our worst, our Beloved Community is the relationships we have with each other.

Reach out. Talk. Write an email or note. Check on someone. Follow-up with a joy or a sorrow from a Sunday Service. When we build relationships, we build community. And the beauty of both of those things is that study after study shows that relationships and being vulnerable is what gives us sustainability and resilience. We are all interdependent after all.

I recently read an article that was based on this idea: “If a job is worth doing, it’s worth doing poorly.” Fascinating. This aligns with another concept that I’ve been trying out this year, “I am enough.” Don’t wait for perfect. Don’t wait for getting it right. Move forward with what your heart tells you is the right thing to do. Apologize, adjust, retool and grow as you venture forward with yourself or with your ideas.

If we start to believe that we must have certain things in place and must follow certain rules in order to do something, we limit our possibilities. And possibilities are where it’s at. I love potential. I love ideas. I love possibilities. In this zone, I don’t have to have the answers. I can make mistakes. Things can, and they do, go wrong. But that’s how it is supposed to go and adjustments can be made. Mulligans? Do-overs? These give us outcomes that we would otherwise limit ourselves from experiencing or learning.

I hope you will be inspired to get to know each other, knowing that you are enough exactly the way that you are. There is room for mistakes. There is room for do-overs. There is room to start exactly where you are and begin to move forward.

A Great Show of Strength

We are in the last half of our budget drive. We don't have specific numbers yet, but this congregation has shown a great deal of power in the last month. An early show of strength in this year's budget drive was the Visiting Steward Orientation. The energy was palpable! A wonderful group like that was sure to instigate some great conversations. Then the terrific Kickoff event happened. The worship service was wonderful, with a great sermon and inspiring music. The Covenanting between Congregants and Visiting Steward was enough to give one goosebumps.

The celebration afterwards could stir even the most uncommitted of hearts! We joined our children in a riotous game of The Human Machine. We swelled with pride upon hearing a wonderful testimonial about the growth of one of our young people. We listened with intensity as we heard about our future. It seemed as though we were thinking, "We can make this happen!"

Our Machine on the wall in our lobby is growing with each Financial Commitment Form that is turned in. You may be in the midst of a visit from your Steward. If you have not been contacted, and would like a visit, please let us know and we'll see that one gets up. More to come.

Let's keep reveling in our power!
Blessed be, Heike Saynisch & Mary Wagner

Financial Update

	February	Year to date
Income	$10,706	$114,925
Expenses	$15,027	$101,354

Income for the month of February was $10,705.54 against Expenses of $15,027.20 for a net loss for the month of $4,321.66. Expenses were higher this month due to the payment of workers' compensation and building insurance. There was also a payout of $1,058 for the Share the Plate program.

The good news is that we are over $13,000 ahead of expenses for the year to date and have a $27,000 balance in the checking account. Contributions are six percent ahead of the level expected at this point in the budget cycle. Miscellaneous fundraising is ahead of budget.

Because of this year's light snowfall (so far) plowing costs will be minimal. We have yet to receive an invoice for the few occasions when the plow operator showed up. In other business the committee recommended that a net expenses account to track funds in the Minister's discretionary funds. This is the same way we track the income and expenses for the men's shelter fund.

Investing in Reeb's Long-Term Future

Throughout our working lives, most of us provide for future retirement. Congregations are no different; the Unitarian Universalist Association (UUA) claims that every congregation should have, as one of its major supporting pillars, an Endowment Fund that provides financial stability and investment income into the future. In May, the Board of Trustees will ask the congregation to add a resolution to the congregational Bylaws formally establishing an Endowment Fund and a committee that will administer it, constrained by the Bylaws and also Policies and Procedures that will be adopted at the same time.

The proposed rules will provide for investment of the Fund in a social-justice-friendly manner and prevent withdrawal for use in annual budgets until the Fund reaches the level of the operating budget of the previous year. After that, up to half of the fund's averaged investment income can be used by the Board, while the rest keeps adding to the Fund's growth. This Endowment Fund will enable us to donate funds now that will sustain Reeb into the future. Soon we will provide much more information about the proposed Endowment Fund.

From the Office

You may know that on several occasions, Tia Maeder and her family and friends have sold Black Lives Matter t-shirts on the sidewalk in front of James Reeb UU. I'm glad that we helped promote racial equality in this small way.

Ms. Maeder, an East High School parent, contacted the Reeb office to ask permission to sell t-shirts and Girl Scout cookies in the parking lot at the end of 4th Street. I told her to set up in front of James Reeb instead because the city owns the parking area. Ms. Maeder borrowed two of our folding banquet tables and went to work. She's been back several times to sell Black Lives Matter and Justice 4 Tony Robinson shirts, including the day of Tony Robinson's funeral.

Our proximity to East High School has been a special gift this year, as we are also hosting a mentorship program for African American high school students in our Sanctuary Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

Yours in growing faith,
Elizabeth J. Barrett, Office Administrator
